The News
November 5th 6pm©
by Noele Bouazouni-Prier

Cédric Jubillar will be heard again by the investigating chamber on November 16th. His lawyers appeal the rejection of his request for release. The father is indicted for the murder of his spouse after the disappearance of his wife Delphine in Cagnac-les-Mines, in the Tarn. It has been almost a year since there has no sign of life from the nurse. Cédric Jubillar is still in solitary confinement, in pre-trial detention near Toulouse.

One year in prison for Alexandre Benalla, as decided by the Paris court. The former collaborator of Emmanuel Macron was prosecuted for acts of violence Place de la Contrescarpe in Paris on the sidelines of the parades of May 1, 2018. He is also prosecuted for the fraudulent use of diplomatic passports. Vincent Crase, former employee of La République en Marche, is sentenced to two years of a suspended prison sentence.

The bishops of France recognize the responsibility of the Church in cases of pedocriminality. "This responsibility entails a duty of justice and reparation", considers Monseigeurr Éric de Moulins-Beaufort, the president of the Conference of Bishops. A statement that comes a month after the publication of the Sauvé report which estimated that there has been 330,000 victims of sexual assaults within the Church, since the 1950s.

Didier Raoult faced the Ordre des Médecins. The controversial professor from Marseille was heard this morning in Bordeaux. He is accused of having promoted the use of hydroxychloroquine without the validation of solid studies. Didier Raoult is accused of having violated the code of medical ethics.

After weeks of debate, the National Assembly gave the green light to the extension of the sanitary pass. It was voted this morning that the measure will be enforced until July 31, 2022, if the government considers it necessary. The opposition criticizes the text as it spans the presidential election. Les Républicains and the left have already submitted appeals to the Constitutional Council.