

The News

December 26th, 1pm ©

by Nia Cason

The suspect in the assassination of three Kurdish people on Friday in Paris, was heard today by an examining magistrate. The 69-year-old man was placed in police custody yesterday afternoon after leaving the psychiatric infirmary. During his interrogation, he admitted having a "hatred of foreigners" that had become "pathological", and has described himself as depressive and suicidal. The search at his home did not reveal any link with an extremist ideology. A vigil in tribute to the victims will start this afternoon near the Kurdish cultural center, where the shooting broke out.

Just 3 weeks after their first strike action, many doctors will again close their practices from today to demand better working conditions and a salary increase. They also want a doubling of the price of consultations, from 25 to 50 euros, and an improvement in working conditions. A demonstration is planned for January 5th in Paris.

In question, the exclusion of Adrien Quatennens (cat-e-nons. More than a thousand militants of la France insoumise have demanded heavy sanctions against the deputy, who has been condemned for domestic violence and only temporarily excluded from his parliamentary group. They denounce a "vertical system favoring the protection of senior executives".

Ukraine will today officially request the exclusion of Russia from the UN Security Council. The country has been a permanent member since 1945. According to the Ukrainian Minister of Foreign Affairs, this exclusion of Russia is already being discussed in diplomatic circles.

At least 32 people are dead in the United States in the middle of a winter storm. The thermometer showed temperatures exceeding -30 degrees over an entire part of the country, particularly in New York State. More than 3,000 flights were canceled yesterday as a result.