They have 4 days to examine 14,000 amendments. The debates on the pension reform must end on Friday in the Assembly, and the MPs are still examining article 2 devoted to the "senior index". There are still several amendments before the long-awaited article 7, which pushes back the retirement age to 64.

The review of the reform will begin in two weeks in the Senate, after a week of parliamentary break.

A man was taken into custody in relation to the accident involving Pierre Palmade. The individual was arrested last night in the Somme. He claims to be one of the passengers who was in the comedian's car at the time of the accident on Friday evening in Seine-et-Marne. Investigators remain very cautious for now on the version of the events of this man in his 40s, who was under the influence of alcohol at the time of his arrest.

Liberal doctors are on strike today for a new day of action to demand an increase in the price of consultations and to oppose a bill, examined today in the Senate. The text aims to give direct access to certain nurses or physiotherapists without going through a doctor.

And then soccer with a big night tonight for the PSG: Paris receives Bayern Munich in the round of 16 first leg of the Champions League. Injured for two weeks, Kylian Mbappé will be with his team tonight.
