

The News

March 23rd 6pm©

by Noele Bouazouni-Prier

800,000 demonstrators were in Paris according to the CGT. These are the highest figure in the capital since the start of the mobilization. And there were tensions in this Parisian demonstration with people, dressed in black and masked, who threw stones at a fast-food restaurant and set fire to garbage cans. Tensions also in Rouen where a demonstrator had a thumb torn off. According to the Nupes MP of Seine-Maritime, Alma Dufour, 7 demonstrators were injured. She denounces cascading police violence.

Meanwhile, the mobilization in the refineries is causing tensions over fuel in the main airports of Ile-de-France. The supply of kerosene in the region is becoming critical, warns the Ministry of Energy Transition. To remedy this, the government has issued a requisition order for strikers at the TotalEnergies refinery in Normandy, which has been shut down since last weekend.

A tense social climate in France which does not call into question the arrival of King Charles III in Paris on Sunday. The British government announces that it is not aware of any change of plan concerning this trip. The unions have already announced that the royal visit was in their sights. According to the Daily Mail, Buckingham Palace is closely monitoring the situation in France.

And an administrative investigation has been opened by the National Education after the death of a high school student during a baccalaureate exam in Lille on Tuesday. The 19-year-old young man had heart problems. Some testimonies question the attitude of the supervisors present in the room during the victim's heart attack.

Five years after the death of Arnaud Beltrame, La Poste will issue a stamp bearing the image of the gendarme killed during the terrorist attack in Trèbes, Aude. This stamp will only be available on order. It represents Arnaud Beltrame in gendarme uniform. Emmanuel Macron paid tribute to the soldier today in a tweet.

And then soccer. It's now official, the next Champions Trophy will take place in Thailand. The match between the French champion and the winner of the Coupe de France will take place on August 5 in Bangkok.