Charles III and his wife Camilla arrived this afternoon in Paris and will be in France for three days. As soon as they arrived, they went under the Arc de Triomphe to rekindle the flame of the unknown soldier alongside Emmanuel Macron.

This evening, they will have dinner at the Palace of Versailles, in the company of many personalities, from politics to sports and culture.

Olivier Véran stands by the decision to arrest a schoolboy in his classroom on Monday in Alfortville. The 14-year-old young man had called for the death of a student on social networks. After criticism from parents of students and teachers, the government spokesperson specified that the arrest had been carried out with the agreement of the prosecution.

And the sale at a loss of fuels is jeopardized. The main leaders of large-scale distribution are refusing the measure proposed by the government. The sale at a loss was intended to help counter the increase in prices at the pump.

And to finish, in soccer, the rest of the first day of the Champions League continues. After the victory of the PSG last night against Dortmund, Lens plays this evening on the field of Seville. The Lensois, last in Premier League, want a fresh start in Europe. Kick-off at 9 p.m.
