

The News

February 12th 6pm

by Noele Bouazouni-Prier

"It's a real scourge that we absolutely must regulate". The new Minister of Education Nicole Beloubet is tackling school bullying. This was the theme of her first visit to a middle school in Reims this morning. A phenomenon which effects on average at least one student per class according to the anonymous self-assessment carried out in schools in the first quarter. This vast survey will be repeated each year in the form of an annual barometer of harassment. Additional resources will also be allocated, notably the creation of 150 full-time jobs aimed at fighting harassment.

More resources are also what liberal nurses are demanding. They have followed in the footsteps of farmers by organizing today go-slow operations in many cities such as Nice, Marseille and Bordeaux. The Collectif des infirmiers libéraux en colère calls all liberal nurses in France to a new demonstration next Saturday.

As for farmers, will they resume their movement? It is not excluded if the measures announced by the Prime Minister do not materialize between now and the Agricultural Show at the end of February. The threat is in any case clearly expressed by the FNSEA which says it has not seen any results on the ground so far. The union will be received tomorrow at Matignon by Gabriel Attal.

Also in the news, a man was placed in police custody in Pas de Calais, after killing 3 people this morning with his vehicle at the exit of the village of Stain Becque. The tragedy seems to be an accident. The driver supposedly went off course in a bend and finished on the sidewalk where there were 4 people. One of the victims is in critical condition.

And the orange alert was lifted at midday in the departments of the Atlantic coast. There is major damage in Gironde and the hospital of Arès is partially flooded. Patients on the ground floor had to be transferred to the first floor and the emergency room is closed. However, the service should reopen this evening.